Pastern Customs Carried Out at Tokio To-day and Hundreds of Thousands of People Looked on In Veneration.

Tokio, Sept. 13.—The second part of the ceremony in the funeral of the late emperor of Japan took place to-night, when the casket containing the body started on the journey to Aoyama and Monayama for burial. The passage of the funeral car was attended by many

The streets were brilliantly lighted with torches and are lights, and between the lights were sacred trees and cloth-covered poles surmounted by wreaths of evergreen. Those who participated in the proces-ion were holders of orders, merit officials, many ranks of ministers of state, Korean members of Parliament and imperiol council; presidents of provincial assemblies, the foreign princes and spe-cial embassies, including that of the United States, did not participate. They went directly to Aoyama after the fuprecedence came next. The empress then entered in native court dress made of hemp cloth, her unbound hair falling on her shoulders. Her upper garment was of dark brown and her skirt of dull orange. The court ladies and maids of honor, as well as princesses of the blood were also thus attired. The dowager empress' procession was of a similar character.

Others in the hall comprised government officials of the first rank, peers of Japan and Korea, members of the House of Representatives and of the imperial cabinet, the presidents of various government institutions, the mayor of Tokio and the chairman of the Tokio city council. The members of the diplomatic corps formed a group apart in a place of honor.

As soon as the imperial processions had entered the hall the hanging screen in front of the catafalque was removed by the ritualists and the Shinto band played a soft dirge on instruments reembling flutes and drums.

The chief ritualist and his assistants proffered the offerings of sacred food, to the continued accompaniment of Shinto music, after which other offerings of red and white cloth enclosed in willow boxes were made. Prayers for the
